Frequently Asked Questions

- Investable assets of approximately $150,000 and more
- High net worth ($2 million to $10 million in liquid assets)
- Ultra high net worth (over $10 million in liquid assets)

What Are Bank of Utah's Standards for Managing Investments?

As a trustee or other appointed fiduciary role, Bank of Utah has a duty to manage investments like a prudent investor. As an investment management agent, the bank has a duty to manage investments in the best interests of its clients.

Whether as a fiduciary or investment agent, Modern Portfolio Theory guides our methodology to maximize investment return with diversification for your level of investment risk. This includes identifying your risk tolerance and investment objective, setting the investment objective in writing, then applying the portfolio strategy allocation.

The bank's trust and investment services are examined annually by the FDIC and state banking regulators to help ensure that your investments are managed to these standards of care required by law and regulation.

What Types of Securities Can Be Included in a Fixed Income Portfolio?

We build laddered portfolios within a determined maturity range from U.S. government treasury or agency bonds, investment grade municipal bonds or corporate bonds, brokered CDs, real estate investment trusts (REITs), high-yield corporate bonds if warranted, or alternative fixed income products.

How Does the Bank Minimize Tax Liability?

We understand that mitigating taxes is important to you. Whether we are managing a large stock portfolio or acting in our fiduciary capacity, our goal is to balance the objective of the portfolio with a strategy of minimizing tax consequences.

What Are Our Investment Management Fees?

Bank of Utah charges fees based on a percent of the assets we manage. This aligns the bank's compensation with the performance of the client's investments.

However, our duty to manage your investments well is required regardless of how our fees are charged. On average, investment management fees are about 1 percent of the portfolio's market value. Lower fees may be applied for larger or fixed income portfolios. Commissions on equity trades are at institutional rates of about three cents per share with a $5 minimum per trade.

Do Managed Accounts Include Custody?

Yes, all managed accounts include custody at no additional cost. Custody-only services for securities are also available at a percentage fee of the market value. The bank charges a bookkeeping fee for managed or fiduciary accounts when the investments are custodied at another firm.

What if I Want to Retain Control Over My Investments But Seek Recommendations?

For clients who want to retain control over management of their securities as a self-directed account, but seek investment recommendations, the bank has partnered with Cetera Advisors for investment advisory services. For more information, click here.
